Promising Practice Ideas—Workplace Wellness Programs to Increase Colon Cancer Screening and Healthy Lifestyles

Description

The Lincoln-Lancaster County Health Department, Work Well, and the Nebraska Colon Cancer Program partnered with worksites to encourage colon cancer screening, distribute screening kits, and provide healthy lifestyle education. A diverse cross-section of workers was reached.

Ingredients

- Partnerships with worksites, including Wellness Coordinators at each site.
- Health Risk Appraisal Surveys and a system for distribution and return.
- Educational materials and support for healthy lifestyle practices, including materials in the primary language of workers.
- Colon cancer screening kits and/or colonoscopy coverage information.
- Information about community programs to support healthy lifestyles.
- Information about colon cancer screening and insurance coverage.
- Other health screening, such as blood pressures and blood panels.
- Data about colon cancer in Nebraska and/or the region.

• Awards to companies for efforts, outcomes, and supportive environments.

Preparation

Step 1: Identify community programs that already work with area companies on workplace wellness; find companies interested in collaboration on colon cancer screening and healthy lifestyles.

Step 2: Meet the key staff at participating companies to identify the best way to reach employees. Develop agreement to appoint a company Wellness Coordinator to organize and implement the project.

Step 3: Develop enrollment forms and paper and electronic educational materials, such as emails, direct mail, brochures, pamphlets, and posters.

Step 4: Develop a system to follow up on positive screening results and to notify the person’s physician of both positive and negative screening.

Step 5: Develop evaluation plans, including a short pre-survey and post-survey.

Step 6: Provide support to companies in implementing and evaluating their projects.
Keys to Success

- Enrollment of workers by sending them a letter and enrollment form gives them time to think about the decision and to complete the form.
- An understanding of the companies’ structures, workplace wellness programs, worker characteristics, methods of contacting workers, and number of sites and shifts.
- Support at all management levels.
- Information for employees on insurance coverage for colonoscopy, cost and coverage/non-coverage of prep kits, and company policy for prep time.
- Presentations by a cancer survivor, especially if that person is a co-worker.

Summary

To reduce the burden of colon cancer and increase awareness of the effects, causes, and symptoms, multiple worksites employing a diverse population were enlisted to provide colon cancer screening and education on cancer screening and healthy lifestyles.
