Given the Board's and DHHS' tremendous efforts to address regulatory changes, it would be more appropriate to pursue lower cost alternatives for the EpiPen. Dr. Miller pointed out that the State was able to pass legislation to put Narcan in the hands of anyone to use in the event of an opioid overdose when there are other options available short of giving Narcan. There is no other option besides epinephrine in the case of anaphylaxis. Dr. Miller requested assistance in pursuing legislation in the same manner as was pursued for the use of Narcan.
